(c) The main thrust of the Government policy is to increase the production of oilseeds and edible oils in the country for which various steps are being taken. Larger imports of edible oils are being made to supplement domestic production and availability. Larger allocations of imported edible oils are being made for distribution through the Public Distribution System. Increased allocation of imported edible oils is being made to the vanaspati industry to relieve pressure on indigenous oils. Use of groundnut and mustard oils in the manufacture of vanaspati is prohibited so that these oils are available for direct consumption. The State Governments are enforcing the various provisions of the Essential Commodities Act and similar legislations to prevent hoarding, blackmarketing etc.
